Monday, November 12 - Afternoon

Communications and Media Training

Are you unsure how to use social media? Maybe you're very comfortable using some communications skills and not others? Ever wanted to be the voice speaking up for YOUR community? This course will allow participants to gain skills on various social media platforms and instruct participants on how to keep your message consistent, constant and engaging.

Working with Allies – how to build effective and lasting coalitions with other social movements

Ever wonder how to get community groups together in your area to fight back against threats to public services? How do you build a community coalition to demand social justice? Find out how to get allies to work together to strengthen bonds in your community.

Becoming a candidate – what's involved?

Have you ever thought you could do a better job than some politicians you know? Want to know all that is part of becoming a candidate for public office? Whether your interest is at the school board, municipal, provincial or federal level, this workshop is for you.

Campaign 101: How locals can get involved in Electoral Politics

So you've heard that "politics matter" and you know that who gets elected is incredibly important, but you really aren't sure what it means to get your local involved in elections. If this sounds familiar, then this workshop is for you. Even if you've done some pieces of election work before in your local, you will learn things.

Issue-based campaigns during Elections

Elections are never only about which politician or political party to vote for. Elections are about important issues and how action on them will shape our future. Come to find out more about issue-based campaigns in the lead up to and during elections, what our coalition partners do in this regard, and the elements of a successful issue-based campaign.

New Election Finance Laws and Models for Organizing

Election day in Ontario is June 7, 2018. The parties are already gearing up for the race by assembling their campaign teams, nominating candidates and preparing platforms, although the campaign doesn't officially start until May. Learn how changes in Election Finance Laws and spending limits can affect you and your local union. Learn how Ontario's 2018 election campaign will be different and steps you, local activists, and your union can take to win.
